MID CAP INDEX FUND (NOMIX)

As of 12/31/18

FUND COMMENTARY

In the fourth quarter of 2018, the S&P 400 MidCap Index returned -17.28%. Mid-cap equities underperformed large-cap equities, as measured by the S&P 500 Index which returned -13.52% in the fourth quarter.

The top-performing sectors over this time period were utilities and consumer staples, returning -0.72% and -8.01%, respectively. Energy and health care were the worst-performing sectors for the quarter, with returns of -42.04% and -20.04%, respectively.

The Mid Cap Index Fund posted a total return of -17.29% for the quarter compared to the -17.28% return of the Fund's benchmark, the S&P Midcap 400 Index. The S&P 500 Index reversed course in the fourth quarter and fell substantially leading to the first negative annual return in a decade. U.S. investor fears over the ongoing global trade war and the path of interest rates were the main drivers of sentiment. On the trade war front, despite initial positive reports coming out of the G-20 Summit, investors questioned whether additional progress would be made before the March 1st deadline. The Federal Reserve increased interest rates by a quarter point in December and then lowered 2019's expected number of increases. Investors found shelter in more defensive sectors, with utilities and real estate leading from a performance perspective relative to other sectors. Energy led the decline with the collapse of crude oil prices during the period.

Please remember that all investments carry some level of risk, including the potential loss of principal invested. They do not typically grow at an even rate of return and may experience negative growth. As with any type of portfolio structuring, attempting to reduce risk and increase return could, at certain times, unintentionally reduce returns.
